DETAILED ACTION

REASONS FOR ALLOWANCE

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The patent to Boylan et al. discloses a card game comprising red and black cards. Each player is dealt a hand of cards. Each player totals the numerical values of the red cards in their hand, and totals the numerical values of the black cards in their hand. Then the net total or spread of each hand is determined by subtracting the lowest total from the highest total to arrive at a difference. A winning hand is determined by comparing each player's spread with a winning spread closest to seven without exceeding seven, or alternatively, a winning hand is a hand having a spread equal to that of the dealer.

The patent to Mkrtchyan disclose a card game wherein each player is dealt two cards, and each player subtracting the lower card value from the higher card value to obtain a point total for the hand.

The patent to Nguyen discloses a card game comprising red and black cards. Each player is dealt a hand of cards. Each player totals the numerical values of either the red cards in their hand, or the black cards in their hand. The point total of each players hand is compared to a banker hand.

The patent to Miller et al., Ferrer and Rozzi, Sr. et al. each discloses Blackjack or Baccarat type game wherein the Ace = 1 or 11, King = $\frac{1}{2}$, Queen = $\frac{1}{2}$, Jack = $\frac{1}{2}$.

None of the cited references alone or in combination teach the claimed steps of "Ace = 1 or 11, King = $\frac{1}{2}$, Queen = $\frac{1}{2}$, Jack = $\frac{1}{2}$," "b. designating a first column and a second column for each player; c. said dealer dealing a card to said first column and to said second column of each said players including said dealer, repeating step c. until there are three cards in each of the said player's first and second columns; e. calculating the spread between each player's first column and second column by totaling said point value of the cards in each column and subtracting the lowest total from the highest total to arrive at a difference that is the spread between player's columns".

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
